What Are Assets?

Assets are 40 values, experiences, and qualities that help kids succeed. "Parent involvement in schooling" is one of six support assets

* Based on Search Institute surveys of 217,277 6th- to 12th-grade youth throughout the United States during the 1999-2000 school year.

Staying Involved in School

It's a downward trend. As children start kindergarten, parents are quite involved with their education. We attend parent-teacher conferences, cheer on our children at school concerts and events, and hang up schoolwork in the family art gallery: on the refrigerator.

But sometimes we distance ourselves from school as our children grow older. Kids seem to be doing well without as much of our involvement. They're supposed to be independent. Right?

Kids need their parents to stay actively involved in their education throughout middle and high school.

Parents can easily stay involved in small ways that will make a big difference. For example:

- Maintain ongoing communication with your child's teacher(s). Call to check in every other month—before trouble appears. See if teachers have email.
- Join a parent-teacher organization. If you can't volunteer a lot of time, say so.
- Volunteer to help out in small ways. Check with the teacher or the school's volunteer coordinator.
- Help seniors fill out college applications.

The CHALLENGE

Most youth don't have parents who are active in their schooling. Only 34% of young people experience this asset. And involvement drops dramatically across the middle and high school years, from 50% of 6th graders having this asset to only 20% of 12th graders.

- Volunteer to speak on career day.
- Attend all conferences. If you can't make it on the designated date, arrange to meet at another time.
- Read the same book your child is assigned in English class, and talk about it together.

time together

Three ways to be more involved with your child's education:

1. Encourage your child's teacher to meet with both you and your child so that everyone can have a say in expectations and goals.
2. Go to a museum together to look at exhibits that are related to your child's classes.
3. Make attending school events a priority. Keep track of them on a family calendar.
